Recent Legal Actions on behalf of opioid-exposed babies and children

The worst part of America's growing opioid addiction epidemic is the unintended victims: Men and women who became unwitting users because they were simply following their doctor's orders on use of prescribed medications. Here are some articles compiled by our medical experts which explore the statistical scope of this crisis.

Class actions filed on behalf of children who will need life-long medical and other specialized care because of opioid-addicted pregnant moms.

These cases seek to create a court-administered, continually-replenishing, dedicated no-limit nation-wide fund to provide for the short and long-term treatment of NAS affected infants who will require lifelong medical and therapeutic assistance. The financial responsibility for this fund is put on the prescription opioid manufacturers, distributors and retailers named in the suits rather than on cash-strapped government budgets and taxpayers.
